HOW DOES CONCARGO CREATE 'ADDED VALUE'?

By providing high levels of product availability at the lowest levels of inventory and cost through the efficient and effective practise of:

- ❖ Inventory management
- ❖ Minimising throughput costs
- ❖ Distribution centre location
- ❖ Minimising distribution centre costs
- ❖ Cross docks
- ❖ Enhancing customer service
- ❖ Quick response systems
- ❖ Integration of the supply chain and through the effective use of technologies such as:

- ❖ Specialised Distribution & Transportation Software
- ❖ Computer-aided warehouse design
- ❖ Custom-tailored storage and retrieval systems
- ❖ Cellular communication & satellite tracking

These practices and technologies provide the necessary support for high-speed and low-cost throughput and efficient warehouse operations.

WHAT ARE THE OTHER TYPES OF WAREHOUSES?

1. Private Warehouse: is operated by the owner of the goods stored there. A private warehouse can be privately owned or leased facility.

Disadvantages:

- ❖ Inventory deployment is not the company's primary business, so its expertise and focus is not on the optimal number, best locations, best design, best practices, and best equipment and technology for its DC's. Startup is costly and time consuming, hiring and training requires expertise.
- ❖ It is often difficult for firms operating their own warehouses to determine fixed and variable costs. Cost overruns are borne entirely by private operator.

2. Contract / Third party: Concargo also offers a hybrid approach to public and private services. Unlike the public warehouse, which typically offers a month-to-month agreement, the contract warehouse usually has a long-term arrangement. A third party operator provides a wide variety of services for manufacturers and suppliers who decide to outsource part or all of their inventory deployment operations, including packaging, assembly or other extraordinary activities. In such cases, the contract warehouse provides an element of stability in procuring services.

Advantages:

- ❖ Inventory deployment is their core competency. This results in optimal logistics channel efficiency.
- ❖ They can often relieve their customers of DC management concerns such as labour, safety, damage and obsolescence while representing the customer in the marketplace.
- ❖ System or procedural changes necessary for inventory deployment efficiencies are more readily accepted and implemented by an outside expert who is not constrained by levels of internal corporate approval.
- ❖ The learning curve and investment associated with new technologies is absorbed by the third party operator and allocated across its client base.
- ❖ A full service third party operator with expertise can provide a totally integrated logistics system for the customer, including transportation management and inventory deployment.

CONCARGO'S FACILITIES ARE:

Dry Goods / general merchandise: Used by manufacturers, distributors, or customers for storing any kinds of dry, non-perishable products.

CONCARGO OFFERS THE FOLLOWING CUSTOMISED SERVICES:

1. Stockpiling is the use of the warehouse as a reservoir to handle production overflow. This overflow is needed to balance for seasonal / level production and seasonal / level demand.
2. Product mixing provides an opportunity for manufacturers which have product-orientated factories in different locations to use a warehouse to combine items in the entire line.
3. Product logistics serves the need to stockpile semi-finished products. One use of warehousing in production logistics is the principle of "JIT", that requires closely coordinated well-organised warehousing and precise loading of vehicles.
4. Consolidation is the use of warehousing to gather goods that have been picked to fill a unique customer order. This way the products can be shipped to final destination in a more efficient way.
5. Distribution is the reverse of consolidation. It involves the push of finished products by the manufacturer to the market, whereas consolidation involves the pull of supplies by the customers.
6. Customer service is, at times, the only motive for establishing and inventory. The warehousing options considered earlier all relate to production, marketing and transportation costs. Yet, at times a warehouse stock is justified only by the demands of the customer.

EXACTLY WHAT DOES CONCARGO DO FOR YOU?

1. Receiving activities include:
 - ❖ The orderly receipt of all materials coming from the inbound carrier into the warehouse at the receiving dock bay
 - ❖ Verifying the quantity of goods received
 - ❖ Assuring the quality of the materials as ordered
 - ❖ Inspecting the merchandise for damage
 - ❖ Documenting their receipt and processing receipt documents
 - ❖ Adjusting the inventory count for received goods
 - ❖ Attaching license plates (bar code serial numbers used to track the movement of the items)
 - ❖ Finally routing the goods to their next destination
2. Prepacking (optional) may be performed in a warehouse when products are received in bulk from a supplier and subsequently packed singly, in merchandisable quantities or in combinations with other parts to form kits or assortments. An entire receipt of merchandise may be processed at once, or a portion may be held in bulk form to be processed later.
3. Putaway is the transfer of goods from the receiving dock or the sorting area to storage or to other specific areas for value-added activities such as breakbulk, product mixing , kitting, or other shipping preparation to be performed at a later time. Putaway includes both transportation and a placement component.
4. Reverse order picking is the optional separation of merchandise ready to meet the customer, prior to putaway, according to advance orders.
5. Storage is the physical containment of merchandise while it is awaiting a demand. The form of storage will depend on the size and quantity of the items in inventory and the handling characteristics of the product or its customer.

6. Order picking is the process of removing the appropriate items from storage in the right quantity to meet a specific demand. Items can be individually picked to fill specific customer orders or batched before picking to fill several customer orders. It presents the basic service that the warehouse provides for the customer, and is the function around which most warehouses designs are based. Picking is sometimes done in two stages: in the first stage, forward picking, the inventory is moved from a reverse or bulk storage location to a primary picking location. Order processing patterns are analysed to determine the minimum and the maximum levels of stock to be kept in the primary picking location. As stock levels reach the minimum, stage two, items from the bulk storage are picked – not to fill orders but to re-stock the primary picking area. This is called replenishment.

7. Consolidation includes the sortation of batch picks into individual orders, and accumulation of distributed picks into single orders, when an order has more than one item and the accumulation is not done as the picks are made. During the process of consolidation, the set of above-mentioned value-adding activities might be performed. A bulk load may be broken into smaller units for shipment (breakbulk). Products arriving from different manufacturers may be mixed to fill one customer's request (product mixing). Or a unique item may be created from a group of other specific individual items, which are packed together in the container the customer will handle (kitting).

8. Packaging (optional) may be done as an optional step after the picking process. As in the prepackaging function, individual items or assortments are boxed for more convenience use. Waiting until after picking to perform these functions has the advantage of providing more flexibility in the use of on-hand inventory. Individual items are available for use in any of the packaging configurations right up to the time of need.

9. Pricing is current at the time of sale. Prepricing at manufacture or receipt into the warehouse inevitably leads to some repricing activity, as price lists change while merchandise sits in inventory. Picking tickets and price stickers are sometimes combined into a single document.

10. Packing and shipping may include the following tasks:
 - ❖ Checking orders for completeness
 - ❖ Packaging of merchandise in a appropriate shipping container
 - ❖ Preparation of shipping documents, including packing list, address label, and bill of lading
 - ❖ Weighing of order to determine shipping charges
 - ❖ Accumulation of orders by outbound carrier
 - ❖ Loading trucks (Provided by Concargos)
 - ❖ Third party logistics

CONCARGO ALSO OFFERS DISTRIBUTION ALTERNATIVES:

Logistics: Logistics is the cost-effective process of planning, implementing and controlling efficient movement and storage of raw materials, finished goods, services and related information from point of origin, through warehousing and distribution to the end user for the purposes of conforming to customer requirements.

Cross Dock (“No Storage” Alternative): With a cross dock, manufacturing components, customer orders, or other products are received and then sorted and shipped without ever being stored. This method results in the highest velocity of inventory turnover since it eliminates intermediate storage, it reduces inventory-carrying costs, and a number of inventory processing steps are also eliminated. Information technology is the key to cross docking.

The Pick and Pack division also provides the following additional services:

- ❖ Product inspections
- ❖ Attaching price tickets etc
- ❖ Sorting
- ❖ Unpack Repack
- ❖ Folding for catalogue programmes
- ❖ Printing and labels
- ❖ Storage of pallets / cartons
